

Claywater is a fishing village built into the cliffs that surround it. The population is around 300 people. Consisting of three tiers, the first being mostly residential (12 buildings), the second being shops, services, and more residential (22 buildings), and the third being important buildings and wealthy housing (23 buildings). There are also several buildings on the beach which serve as workhouses & residences for the many fishermen in the village (3 buildings). There are many, many miles of outlying farms in the area that grow pumpkin, tomato, potato, and sweet corn. It is the main source of food throughout Ethra.

The village is known being carved into the eastern cliffs of the Sailor's Downfall coast, and for it's brightly painted roofs in different shades of blue. The main trade is fish, vegetables, and the exporting of goods to the rest of Ethra.
