The dwarves who lived here sent runners to get help. The runners never returned. Help was so near, but no help came.

Dwarves fought hard against the attackers, then more came into the Fort via the cave none of the dwarves knew was there.

Slowly and patiently the tunnelers widened the small hole leading into the cave. They worked at breaking into the dwarf made tunnels at night, when they knew the dwarves would be mostly asleep and relaxed.

No trumpet calls, no drums beating, until all was ready.

After days of fighting, the dwarves were no more.
