

The Minotaurs of the Magumul Empire have erected 18 Guard Towers to protect important sites within the empire. On the map of Magumul they are indicated with small letters a through r. Each houses between 35 and 45 warriors, slaves, and tradesmen.

The Minotaurs are divided into 4 classes: Majerna, Bull, Steer, and Cow. The Majerna look like mighty winged bulls with the head of a wise appearing bearded man. They are the law givers, clerics, and Govenors of the Empire. There are few of them within the Empire as they account for 1/2 percent of all births. The Bulls appear as heavily muscular humans with the heads of bulls. They act as the military's command structure as well as Guild Masters within the Empire. About 40% of births are male, and at the age of 6 they are inspected and only the best 1 in 10 males are allowed to grow into adult Bull status, the rest are castrated and become Steers. Castration causes the Steers to grow taller and stronger than the Bulls and they make up the majority of the fighting forces. They also become skilled tradesmen and some become overseers of the slave population within the Empire. Cows make up the majority of births and appear as normal cows with vaguely feminine heads. They are minimally intelligent and for the most part are gathered in the nine great herds that graze on the coastal plains.

An important part of Minotaur society are the slaves that perform much of the manual labor and those trade skills that require less training. They are considered to be a major source and measure of wealth within the Empire and as a result, their lot is better than many of the free peasants in other lands.