Bee Hill.

Well, a large colony of honey bees live there. The farmers are glad of them as they pollinate these fields.

Why are there no guard towers like the other arable land ?

Many years ago, kobolds attacked via this road and field. The bees saw their favorite gardner killed by some large beings. He had been kind to them, getting them water and planting flowers when their water supply had dried up. The other field hands gave report that they distinctly heard small trumpets being sounded. The guards on the walls didn't hear them.

But the bees in Bee Hill did. They attacked the kobolds who never attack this town using this direction ever again.

A traveling druid did communicate with the bees on behalf of the town. Both the bees and the town resolved to come to each other's aid in all such future events.

The field hands, and two adventurers, did convince some bears to leave the bees alone. Find their honey elsewhere.

All has been quiet on this side of town for years.
